The single greatest gift we can give a child is not more assessments or standards. It's a relationship with a caring adult who believes with relentless tenacity in their ability to succeed. In a moment when mental health issues are bearing down on our students, the role of educators must expand to meet not only the academic needs but also the social and emotional needs of our students. Bridging the achievement gap means bridging the relationship gap. Breaking Bold is a strategic session for all educators hungry for both permission and a path to prioritize and cultivate positive relationships with ALL students using the tools and strategies that show up in the classrooms of master teachers who prioritize future focused learning environments.
